

MESSAGE FROM NIKKI BURROUGHS, EXECUTIVE HEAD

Thank you to everyone for supporting our recent Comic Relief fundraising efforts. We have certainly been enjoying the sun over the last week or so - let's hope the warmer weather returns again soon. Things always seem a little better when the sun shines!

Unfortunately, as you may be aware, we do currently have a growing number of Covid-19 cases across our Federation. The current guidance for all schools is that school staff and children must isolate if they test positive and can return to school only if they have two negative tests, 24 hours apart at any time starting from Day 5 and 6. If they do not test negative, they can return to school after 10 days of isolation.

I am aware that many schools in the local area are in the same situation as us, with large numbers absent. This has meant there is a lack of supply teachers and teaching assistants available. Unfortunately, as a result we have needed to close a few classes at Ellen Tinkham recently but we are managing to keep other classes open across our schools with a mixture of teaching assistants and cover. It has meant that some sessions have had to be cancelled in order to free up non-class based staff to cover in class and this may continue into next week. We appreciate the change in routine can cause upset for some of our children and young people but hope that you understand this course of action is taken in the best interests of all at this time.

Covid-19 absence has also affected our office staff so we apologise if you have rung any of our settings and the phone was not immediately answered or an email not responded to - please do bear with us. We continue to do the very best we can under very challenging circumstances and we aim to give you as much notice as possible if classes do need to close.

Despite the challenges over the past couple of weeks, we have continued to have fun with our learning. Since our last Family newsletter, we welcomed 'Live music' into both schools. Seeing the faces of the children, seeing them dancing and happy was amazing – it was even great to see some of them communicating VERY clearly that they didn't want the music to end and that as far as they were concerned, it was NOT time to go back to class!

Earlier on in the month, I was contacted by Ofsted and asked if we could donate/provide some artwork for their office walls. As a result, I have seen the most incredible art work completed by our students. Art work that actually took my breathe away. Art work that I didn't want to take it to Bristol but wanted to keep to put on my office walls.

I made sure that when I handed it over, I gave them a return address! Enjoy the rest of your week.

ABILITY NOT DISABILITY - NEW PROJECT

From Shane Baker, Deputy Head = A new project is supporting businesses in Devon to employ people with disabilities. "Ability Not Disability" has been co-designed by Learn Devon, Adult Social Care, and Employment, Economy and Skills teams, working together with people with disabilities to improve employment opportunities within the county.

The innovative programme is one of 13 projects in the county to receive a share of UK Community Renewal Funding. This could benefit our students nearing completion who want to transition into the world of work.

The "Ability Not Disability" project focuses on the individual and offers a choice of two ways into work for people with disabilities who would like to find employment. Individuals can choose to join Community Works Groups, helping to promote local businesses by working on a series of marketing flyers at no cost to the companies. They will work in teams to build relationships with local businesses, develop their communication and customer service skills, while also gaining practical digital and work skills. The second pathway into work is through the Job Guarantee Scheme. Individuals can access the scheme independently from the Community Works Groups, or for those taking part in the Groups, the project team can also support them to enter the scheme. Everyone needs a bit of help and support at some point. You might be struggling emotionally and looking for strategies to help you cope. Or maybe you just need to talk to someone who understands the extra challenges you face and who can point you in the right direction to get the support you need for your family.

To help, 'Contact' offer 1-1 telephone appointments with a family support adviser for parent and carers who are looking for a listening ear, reassurance and practical and emotional support. Making an appointment is simple: Choose the day (morning, afternoon or evening), and when you register choose the time slot you want. Appointments are regularly updated and are subject to availability. Click here for the link to their website.

SUPPORTING CHILDREN TO DEAL WITH UPSETTING CONTENT

A Guide for Parents and Carers

Raising children in the digital age seems to be getting tougher, with the world currently experiencing so many uncertainties. From the continuing impact of COVID-19 to the war in Ukraine, right now children across the globe can scarcely go online without being exposed to unsettling stories, images and ideas. Reassuring a concerned child can be difficult, especially when bad news feels omnipresent. We've put together some advice to help you in discussing upsetting events with young ones.

1 FIND OUT WHAT YOUR CHILD KNOWS

There are many ways that children are exposed to upsetting content in the media, both online and offline. Before swamping your child with information, find out what they know already. Show them you're interested in what they have to say, practice active listening and try to gauge how much your child has been impacted by what they have seen.

2 RIGHT TIME, RIGHT PLACE

Starting a conversation about upsetting content probably isn't the best idea when your child is studying for an exam or about to go to bed. Choose a time when they're relaxed and open to talking, to make sure you have their full attention. Remember, these conversations can become emotional, so choose somewhere your child feels safe and comfortable.

3 KEEP IT AGE APPROPRIATE

With younger children, try and keep the conversation more general and avoid leading questions and complex detail. You can go slightly deeper into the specifics with young teenagers but keep monitoring their emotional response. With older teens, you can be more open about the realities and consequences of what is happening – but again, do stay aware of their emotional state.

4 EMPHASISE HOPE

Upsetting content can make us feel angry, scared. Upsetting content can make anyone feel angry, scared, sad or overwhelmed. Try to find stories of hope, generosity and strength related to the content you're discussing. Children often feel reassured when they know they can do something to help, so encourage your child's sense of control through activities which make them feel they're positively impacting the events they're concerned about.

5 MONITOR REACTIONS

All children react differently, of course, and young people might not directly say that they're scared, angry, anxious, confused or uncomfortable. Emotional reactions are natural when discussing upsetting topics, so take note of your child's body language and reactions. Allow them to express their feelings in a non-judgmental space and try to stay mindful of how they might be feeling.

6 CONSIDER YOUR EMOTIONS

It's not only young people who find upsetting news difficult to process: adults also have to deal with strong emotions in moments of stress. Children develop coping strategies by mirroring those around them, so staying on top of how you appear to be regulating your emotion on the outside is important for supporting your child through worrying times.

7 SET LIMITS

Managing screentime and content can be difficult at the best of times, but especially in unusual or stressful periods (at the start of the pandemic, for example). It's virtually impossible to keep children away from upsetting content completely, but it's important to try and at least limit exposure by using parental controls, talking about the dangers of harmful content and enforcing screentime limits.

8 TAKE THINGS SLOWLY

Try not to overwhelm your child with information all at once: instead, take the discussion one step at a time. You could make the first conversation a simple introduction to a potentially upsetting subject and then wait until your child is ready to talk again. Opening the door to the conversation and demonstrating that your child can talk to you about this type of issue is a vital first step.

9 ENCOURAGE QUESTIONS

Online, troubling images, posts, videos and stories are shared across multiple platforms, many of which your child might access. Even if the content is actually inappropriate, encourage your child to discuss what they saw instead of being angry at them for seeing it. Children are still learning that not everything online is accurate – you want to be their ultimate source of information, not their device.

10 FIND A BALANCE

There's often a tremendous compulsion to stay right up to date with events. Our phones frequently send us push notifications urging us to read the latest article or view the most recent video on social media. It's essential to remind your child that it's healthy to take regular breaks, and to focus on positive events instead of 'doomscrolling' and risking becoming overwhelmed by bad news.

11 BUILD RESILIENCE

News has never been more accessible. While our instinct may be to shield children from upsetting stories, it's important that they're equipped with the tools to manage this content when they are exposed to it. Talk about upsetting content more generally with your child and emphasise that they can always tell you or a trusted adult if something they see makes them feel uneasy.

12 IDENTIFY HELP

It's hugely important that children know where to find support if they encounter upsetting content online. Encourage them to open up to an adult that they trust, and make sure they're aware of who their trusted adults are. It is essential that children understand that they're not alone, and that help is available if and when they need it.
